REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:
2. Regarding Claim 18, Ashley discloses a coupler for a communications system in which voice and data signals share a local loop between a central office and a customer premise (i.e., a method for implementing narrowband and broadband services on a transmission link of a telecommunications network) (column 2, lines 16-26). Ashley further discloses voice signals below 4 kHz and data signals above 40 kHz (i.e., transferring signals belonging to a narrowband service in a first frequency range below a given threshold frequency and signals belonging to a broadband service in a second frequency range above said threshold frequency in the transmission link) (column 2, lines 36-41). Ashley further discloses a passive low pass filter (Fig. 3, reference 312; Fig. 5; column 4, lines 17-21) connected between the tip and ring lines (i.e., the transmission link) and the low-band transceiver (i.e., separating signals relating to the narrowband service) via a generalized impedance converter (Fig. 5, reference 502; column 4, lines 61-65) between the low-pass filter and the low-band transceiver (i.e., between the transmission link side and a single discrete active impedance converting means). Ashley further discloses the generalized impedance converter (Fig. 5, reference 502; column 4, lines 61-65) between the low-pass filter and the low-band transceiver (i.e., between the low-pass filter and the first interface). Ashley further discloses a high-pass filter (Fig. 3, reference 301; column 4, lines 41-44) between the tip and ring lines and a high band transceiver (i.e., separating signals relating to broadband service in a high-pass filter unit connected between the transmission link and a second interface). However, Ashley discloses only embodiments with two generalized impedance converters (Fig. 5) or no generalized impedance converters (Figs. 6, 7). As such

Art Unit: 2644

Ashley fails to disclose "a single discrete active impedance converting means" and "discrete active impedance converting means located entirely between the passive low-pass filter block and a first interface". Similarly, US Patent 5,623,543 to Cook discloses a low-pass filter for a DSL splitter that uses a pair generalized impedance converter bracketing the filter (Fig. 4, reference 300, 400). As such the prior art fails to disclose or fairly suggest "a single discrete active impedance converting means" and "discrete active impedance converting means located entirely between the passive low-pass filter block and a first interface" as claimed or "matching conducted entirely after ... separating the signals" as claimed. As such, Claim 18 is allowable.

3. Claim 19 is essentially similar to Claim 18 and is allowable for the same reasons.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
